“It is easier to build strong children than to repair a broken man.”
-Frederick Douglass.

Youth has become the center point for development of any country. As per census 2011, every third person in India is a young person (15-29 years: NYP 2014). Proportion of youth population has increased steadily from 16.5 per cent in 1971 to 19.2 per cent in 2011. Currently, India is among the youngest countries with 64 per cent of its population in the working age group. In order to make youth as productive human resource for national development and active citizens in civic engagement activities, they must be equipped with knowledge, essential skills and most importantly positive energy & attitudes towards life.

In the last few years, due to changing socio-economic and political scenario, there have been increasing opportunities as well as challenges in front of youth across India: unemployment, suicide, alcoholism, sex-related offences and general adjustment problems have been only a few. Today, the youth in India form one of the most vulnerable groups, who on the one hand are expected to be the leaders to determine the destiny of India, and on the other hand, are an exploited and confused group. Credible studies have indicated that Indian urban hubs record the highest suicide rates among teenagers in the world. Indeed, sources like that of Global Burden of Disease (GBD) Report (2013) suggest that suicide is the third leading cause of death for adolescents of fifteen to nineteen years old, accounting for fully 14 percent of all deaths in this age group in the country. At a time when India aims at becoming global economic giant, its half the youth population i.e. young women are being pushed to the brink for dowry, the giving and taking of which was banned way back in 1961. There are numerous such instances of regressive and archaic practices. However, there are lot of upcoming opportunities as well before the youth of India with sincere endeavors of union and federal governments recently. Still, majority of concerns of youth across India in general and North-East Region (NER) in particular is still unheard. The region owing to its own historical legacies, geopolitical and socio-cultural context exposes the youth of the region to the situations which are unique, peculiar and deeply challenging.

Problems are sign that there is hope for innovation and a better tomorrow. The pace at which world is changing is drastic. But the adaptation pace is comparatively very slow. From education system to the way market works, people seem scared of letting go of conventional and traditional ways of work. And between this tug of war between traditional and modern approaches, the one who grinds the most is the youth and therefore, it is imperative to have adequate deliberations on youth issues in the country. The current conclave therefore is an attempt to encourage youth participation not just through academic activities but a variety of cultural events based on their interests. With its tagline as “Strength is life, weakness is death” (Swami Vivekananda), the conclave envisions to facilitate active and effective participation of youth (against making them as passive listeners/recipients) in unearthing the layers of their concerns and deliberating upon constructive alternatives for their renewed resilience and hence resurgence.

THEMES and SUB-THEMES

The main theme of the conclave is Global Indian Society- Youth Concerns: Roadmap to Resilience & Resurgence, which aims to deliberate upon youth concerns in contemporary India cutting across subject domains. Apart from its main theme the conference will cover following Sub-themes focused on Youth:

MODUS OPERANDI

Youth constitutes the most vital phase of human life and India is fortunate to be among the youngest countries in the world. Need of the hour is to ensure their active and effective participation in deliberating upon or devising for a roadmap to their resurgence and not just ideational preaching by subject experts or professionals. Hence, the rationale and the broader approach during this youth conclave will be to reinforce active participation of youth and encourage their free (though responsible) expression of concerns through a blend of academic as well as cultural activities, as listed below:
