About The Webinar

Currently, the topic of child rights is central to policy making in global politics; however the recognition that is provided to child rights today had to be worked over the years through discussion and deliberation at global and national platforms. The sad reality is that even after decades of advocating child rights internationally and nationally, millions of children are exposed to abuse, exploitation and discrimination on a daily basis. There is a lack of understanding and awareness regarding importance of child rights among people.

The situation of child rights in India is no different. Various cases of psychological, physical, verbal abuse are reported daily in the country. Thousands of children are engulfed under the horror of child labour, child marriage, prostitution and pornography, bonded labour, trafficking and so on.

Thus, the present webinar on "Child Rights in India: Status and significance" is an initiative to sensitize general public, scholars, policy makers, academicians and social activist to have a discourse on the importance of child rights and various issues related to child rights in the world in general and, India in particular.
